

KEY LEARNING OBJECTIVE

TO UNDERSTAND HOW THE SURFACE BEHAVIOUR IN GROUPS IS RELATED TO THE UNSEEN OR UNSPOKEN INTERPERSONAL DYNAMICS THAT EXIST IN GROUPS

Do you work with or in teams and groups in your professional role(s)?

Groups can be one of the most challenging to decode and understand, in part because of the inner complexities that each member brings into the group that shape the unspoken culture of the group.

To begin to understand groups, perhaps it is worth examining our own experience in groups to enlighten what might be going on in the realm of groups that we are part of or work with.

Contact darryl@growconsult.com.sg to register your interest.

WHO IS THIS FOR?

Who is this for?

- Leaders/Managers who lead teams in their professional roles; or
- Consultants or Coaches who work with intact teams or groups...
- Who are curious about why groups are the way they are, and seek to get another perspective of how groups can be decoded

What You Will Experience

These sessions are for anyone interested in developing a deeper understanding of managerial and leadership processes in organizations.

On top of teaching some theories on groups and group dynamics, the workshop will comprise “here and now” and “review and application” components.

The purpose of the “here and now component” is to allow you to have an experience of being in a group.

The “review and application” component will then provide you with an opportunity to examine your experience and make connections to the theories that were introduced and make connections outside the boundary of the workshop into your reality.

Contact darryl@growconsult.com.sg to register your interest.

WHAT WILL YOU LEARN?

A PPROACH AND KEY CONCEPTS

Tavistock Method - “Group as a Whole “

The Tavistock method originated with the work of the British psychoanalyst Wilfred R. Bion. Convinced of the importance of considering not only the individual but also the group of which the individual is a member, Bion conducted a series of small study groups where he reported his experiences culminating in the book Experiences in Groups (Bion, 1961).

Bion's novel approach of viewing a group as a collective entity evolved into a method. Over time, the design shifted from the roles that individuals assume in work groups to the dynamics of leadership and authority relations in groups. A premise undertaken by this method is that individuals cannot be understood, or changed, outside the context of the groups in which they live, shaped the contours of the group relations conference as a teaching modality.

Key Concepts

- The meaning of "Group-as-a-Whole"
- Bion's Basic Assumptions
- The nature of the unconscious
- Boundaries, Authority, Role and Task (BART)
- Projection, splitting and scapegoating in groups

DETAILS

FEES AND FACILITATOR PROFILES

Dates: 24-25 April 2025

Time: 0900-1800h (2 tea breaks)

Venue: Devan Nair Institute, 80 Jurong East St 21, S(609607); Training Room 01-04

Fees: S$890 nett (S$790 if you register by 15 Mar 2025)
(registration is only confirmed upon payment; non-refundable)

Minimum 10 participants to proceed. Fees will be refunded if the workshop is cancelled.

Kai Foong

Kai Foong has 20 years experience as an organisational psychologist, working with both individuals and intact teams. Her work with groups and intact teams is informed by the systems psychodynamics approach, helping clients develop their reflective capacity to notice the unconscious patterns of behaviour both at the individual and the systemic level which helps or hinders their effectiveness.

Kai Foong is a Registered Psychologist (Singapore). She holds a Masters in Occupational Psychology (Merit) from the University of London.

Darryl

Darryl has 14 years in the leadership development space and works extensively with groups and teams in his interventions, both in facilitation and coaching.

Darryl graduated with INSEAD's Executive Masters(Distinction) in Consulting and Coaching for Change. He has attended several Group Relations Conferences, and also completed multiple Consultant Trainings in the Tavistock style and has consulted on a Group Relations Conference. He is also trained in Transactional Analysis and is an ICF Professional Certified Coach(PCC).

Contact darryl@growconsult.com.sg to register your interest.